

About Matt & Peter Wood:

Magician Peter Wood began performing professionally at the age of ten, and paying his way through high school and college performing at family parties, corporate functions, and community events.

Around the turn of the millennium, Peter's younger brother Matt began to assist him at larger shows, allowing them to create partner routines together. Contrasting his brother's talkative character, Matt Wood's onstage persona is that of a solemn butler, creating a dynamic that audiences love.

Their formula is simple: Peter and Matt scour old magic books and performances, searching for classic magic that has stood the test of time. Then they craft a routine that is unique to them, finding or often creating custom apparatus along the way. The resulting performance is very original, while still retaining the feel of a turn-of-the-century magic show.

The Wood Brothers are feature entertainers at fairs and community events throughout the year, and have clients that include Frito-Lay, Toys R Us, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and the United States Marine Corps. Matt and Peter share the University of Maryland, Baltimore County as their alma mater, and are both members of the Society of American Magicians.
